Comprehension:

Read the given poem and answer the questions based on it :

We like to think of it as parallel to what we know.

Only bigger. One man against the authorities.

Or one man against a city of zombies. One man

Who is not, in fact, a man, sent to understand

The caravan of men now chasing him like red ants

Let loose down the pants of America. Man on the run.

Man with a ship to catch, a payload to drop,

This message going out to all of space. . . . Though

Maybe it's more like life below the sea: silent.

Buoyant, bizarrely benign. Relics

Of an outmoded design. Some like to imagine

A cosmic mother watching through a spray of stars.

Mouthing yes, yes as we toddle toward the light.

Biting her lip if we teeter at some ledge. Longing

To sweep us to her breast, she hopes for the best

While the father storms through adjacent rooms

Ranting with the force of Kingdom Come.

Not caring anymore what might snap us in its jaw.

Comprehension:

Read the following passage and answer the questions below.

Reading is a magical journey that allows us to transcend the confines of our physical surroundings and embark on adventures that span across time and space. It serves as a passport to uncharted territories, a window through which we can peer into the annals of history, and a gateway leading us to the boundless possibilities of the future. When we pick up a book, we are not merely flipping through pages; we are stepping into the shoes of the characters, living their joys and sorrows, and experiencing their triumphs and trials.

The benefits of reading extend far beyond the acquisition of knowledge, although that is certainly one of its invaluable perks. With each word absorbed, our vocabulary blossoms like a garden in spring, enabling us to express ourselves more eloquently and persuasively. Moreover, reading fosters empathy, allowing us to connect with the diverse range of characters we encounter in literature. We feel their emotions, share in their struggles, and celebrate their victories, all from the comfort of our own world.

In a world bustling with distractions, the act of reading provides a sanctuary for the mind, a tranquil refuge where we can retreat to find solace and enlightenment. It fuels our imagination, encouraging it to take flight like a majestic bird soaring through the limitless skies. So, with a book in hand, we are not just reading; we are embarking on a grand odyssey of the mind and spirit, exploring the vast tapestry of human experience, and uncovering the treasures of wisdom hidden within the written word. Therefore, I implore you, dear students, to pick up a book, open its pages, and let your imagination soar to heights yet unknown.
