Case Study - 4 to 8  Directions - Read the short passage below and answer the questions that follow.  On the 10th or 11th of January, after being declared an outlaw by the Senate following expulsion of the tribunes, Caesar crossed the Rubicon, a small river marking the bound between Cisalpine Gaul and Italy. Caesar became a rebel against the Gallic forces. On the rank-and-file soldiers followed their leaders: "the Gallic legions obeyed their patron benefactor, others followed Pompey.  Caesar made sure to address his men: according to his own account, he spoke of injust to him by his political enemies, how Pompey had betrayed him, and focused mostly on rights of tribunes had been trampled by the senate's ignoring tribunician vetoes, paradi tribunes who had fled the city before the troops in their disguises. On the senatus consultimum, Caesar argued it was unnecessary and should be confined only to circumstar which Rome was under direct threat. For most Romans, the choice of what side to pick difficult. Only a small number of people were committed to one side or the other at the hostilities. Caesar's most trusted lieutenant in Gaul, Titus Labienus defected from Cae Pompey, possibly due to Caesar's hoarding of military glories or an earlier loyalty to Poresulting in the fall of regime of Caesar and Rome.	lary both sides, and stices done how the ng the sultum nces in c was onset of sar to
